Excerpt: . . . chancery sittings in Toronto, there was put in the witness box a gentleman of high standing in the community, though, like the worthy Zaccheus, little of stature. As he stood in the box, however, after being sworn, with arms outstretched along the top, and shoulders and head just visible, he presented to the Chancellors observant eye, as it first fell upon him, very much the appearance of some awkward fellow squeezed into a sitting position as comfortably as the straightness of the enclosure would allow; whereupon his lordship admonished the witness to stand up and give his evidence properly. But I am standing up, my lord, said the witness, with such solemnity as truth, spoken under oath, could alone give. An explanation of the true condition of affairs was then made sotto voce to the court, and the examination proceeded. A counterpart to this,...
