Western Electric Type 14 Terminal: --The terminal designed by Messrs. S. P. Grace and R. A. L. Snyder of the Central District and Printing Telegraph Company at Pittsburg, has all the desirable features of a good terminal, and is well adapted for block wiring. This terminal consists of a cast iron box divided into a closed compartment and an open one by a porcelain plate in which binding posts are fixed. A hinged cover closes the open compartment. Lead covered dry core cable is led into the closed compartment at the bottom through a piece of brass tubing and the conductors are soldered to the inner end of the binding posts, after which the closed compartment is nearly filled with cable compound. Drop wires are secured to the outer ends of the binding posts and fan out through small holes in the back of the box which are plugged with putty and is removed only as it becomes necessary to pass wires through. The hinged cover is flanged at the top and sides to prevent the entrance of water, the top of the box and cover being given a considerable pitch to insure its satisfactory shedding, and the lower end of the cover extends a half inch...
