And least from those who hate, who most essay By contumely and scorn to blot the light Which will have entrance even to their hearts; For thence will our Defender tear the veil And show within each heart, as in a shrine, The giant image of Perfection, grown In hates despite, whose calumnies were spawned In the untroubled presence of its eyes! True admiration blinds not; nor am I So blind: I call your sin exceptional; It springs from one whose life has passed the bounds Prescribed to life. Compound that fault with God! I speak of men; to common men like me The weakness you confess endears you more--Like the far traces of decay in suns: I bid you have good cheer! Par. Praclare! Optime! Think of a quiet mountain-cloisterd priest Instructing Paracelsus! yet, tis so. Come, I will show you where my merit lies. Tis in the advance of individual minds That the slow crowd should ground their expectation Eventually to follow--as the sea Waits ages in its bed, till some one wave Out of the multitude aspires, extends The empire of the whole, some feet perhaps, Over the strip of sand which could confine Its fellows so long time: thenceforth the rest, Even to the meanest, hurry in at once, And so much is clear gained. I shall be glad If all my labours, failing of aught else, Suffice to make such inroad, and procure A wider range for thought: nay,...
